Melissa T. Billig has an active transactional and litigation practice with a specialization in design and construction law. Melissa represents owners (commercial and residential), developers, architects, engineers, construction managers and contractors in connection with design and construction agreements, access and license agreements, claims and disputes arising out of breach of contract, professional errors and omissions, defective construction, adjacent construction issues and property damage claims, and dispute resolution, including mediation, arbitration and litigation. Melissa also provides risk, project management and business counseling.

Melissa has represented clients in conjunction with the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center expansion and renovation, the Governors Island Park Project, the World Trade Center Disaster Site, and in both small- and large-scale condominium developments. She has also represented entertainment industry clients in connection with private residential renovations.

Prior to joining Ingram, Melissa was an associate at Wilson Elser. She was named a “Rising Star” in 2012 and selected as a “Super Lawyer” in 2013 (through current) by New York Metro Super Lawyers Magazine. She has been awarded the AV Preeminent Rating from Martindale-Hubbell, the highest attorney rating available. Melissa is highly involved with the Center for Architecture Foundation as a member, board of directors and chair of development committee.
